hiring research assistant for
#WomenLifeFreedom community-engaged collage project

DissentxDesign (a research group at ENVD) is looking to hire a student as a paid research assistant (RA) to help create a large scale collage on the #WomenLifeFreedom women's movement taking place in Iran.

The project links themes of protest, spaces of conflict and violence, and struggles for liberation from misogyny and patriarchal authoritarianism. The RA will work with prof. Shawhin Roudbari to design and implement a community-engaged collage-making platform and to produce high-quality, large-scale collage(s).

The ideal candidate will have advanced skill in Adobe Creative Cloud, particularly Photoshop and Illustrator. The RA will be expected to work effectively with deadlines and maintain reliable communication. The project will likely require between 5 to 10 hours of work per week in November and December. The hourly pay rate is $20/hr.

The project will begin in mid to late November and likely continue through part of the spring semester. The RA will be invited to participate in documenting and disseminating the collage after project completion (e.g. through possible exhibition).

Interested students should submit: 1. a portfolio (with examples of Photoshop and Illustrator work); 2. resume (if you have one); 3. names and contacts of two references (at least one being a faculty member); and 4. a 300 to 500-word statement of interest in this topic and this kind of work.

I would be more than happy to chat about the project and answer questions--reach out to shawhin@colorado.edu or www.calendly.com/shawhinroudbari.

Applications requested via email to dissentxdesign@colorado.edu by 12p, Nov. 16!

Collage by Olalekan Jeyifous
The Studio Museum in Harlem
HarlemWorld: Metropolis as Metaphor